

This is where we are staying, a pristine tropical oasis in a city filled with volcanic rock & dust.

Part of our view from the front porch

Convent

Yes this is where we are staying; it is in stark contrast to what is just outside the Iron Gate. Very few locals have had the opportunity to see inside these walls and to see what possibilities are available for them if they only had the resources.

The convent has its own power and water sources albeit the lake, the majority living in this town don't have either. It is so refreshing to return after a day of training to a place of serenity.

There are 4-5 grounds keepers that care for the compound and they stay busy trimming and cutting.

We are so blessed, we eat well we are safe and secure. Mike and I have our own clean room with no mosquito nets, desk, closet and personal bathroom.

There are several acres here in the compound that is designed for vacationers, conferences and retreats and is open to any denomination. We spoke with two men from Dallas

Theological Seminary who are doing a three day conference in one of the out churches.

God has blessed us abundantly and Mike & I are very thankful to Him and you for your prayers and encouragement. See you in September, Mike & Don

Don't know what you call this but it sure is pretty